Conference Highlights

Saturday Morning Keynote Speaker - Curt Welte Living Your Brand

Are you living your brand? Curt reflects on a lifetime of lessons learned from his experience in customer service starting at an unlikely young age. Through interacting with clients on the hip of his Mother in their home development company, working within the jewelry industry in his teens & beyond, community activism, and an ever evolving business model guided by unexpected opportunity, one theme has remained constant—living your brand has more power than branding your living.

Curt and Jennifer Welte have worked side-by-side since their early 20s. His entrepreneurial soul being balanced by her sense to reel him in. Parenting their six children and running their businesses together have made them inseparable partners. The opening of their original Camilla's Closet consignment store was a result of Curt ignoring the huge sign in his office that said, "no new ideas" and a "we need to talk" conversation at the kitchen table. Curt has been in business his entire life, starting on his mother's hip with his childhood home being the meeting place and model home for the family's development company. From an early age, every personal interaction was an education. Curt and Jennifer operate Camilla's Closet, Camilla's Clearance Outlet, and Petunia's Resale for Rescue in Evansville Indiana with a staff of thirty. They continue to spread their market reach into the consignment and fine jewelry markets nationally. In his limited spare time, Curt continues to write his autobiographical novel "Red Bicycle, Life in the Shadows of Narcissism" with a goal of publishing in late 2026.
